

The Treasury Solicitor's Department turns to FWBS Ltd. To improve their Legal Case Management System

30 September, 2009

Today FWBS Ltd. are proud to announce that The Treasury Solicitor's Department (TSol) have selected their 'Matter Centre' product to significantly improve all aspects of their case management system.

TSol needed a solution to encompass and manage all aspects of legal case management irrespective of work type and practice area, starting with its Litigation and Employment Group on a team by team approach.

TSol is the largest legal department in the Government Legal Service employing over 800 staff. It provides legal services to a number of central government departments and other publicly funded bodies in England and Wales.

The solution was selected after a comprehensive procurement process. Crucial to TSol's decision was the ability of the solution to enable it to deliver processes that ensured Lexcel requirements are adhered to, managed and reported.

FWBS Ltd. have enabled the business of law for over a decade with state of the art case and matter management, integrated workflow and document assembly - all from within the Microsoft Office System.

Paul Jenkins, HM Procurator General and Treasury Solicitor welcomed the agreement to procure the solution and said: "The 'Matter Centre' case management system from FWBS enables us to provide more efficient services and improved information for our clients. In the future this will allow Litigation Group to simplify and change the way it delivers existing business and offer new services. It is a large investment and a major undertaking for TSol which myself and the Board believe is central to the delivery of our 'Towards 2012 Strategy' which is to be the best for our clients, best for our people and best in the business."

Hugh Giles, Head of TSol's Litigation and Employment Group added: "The case management system project is an important and key undertaking that will enable us to make more effective use of the skills we have in the Group and to achieve and demonstrate greater value for money to our clients."

Mark Craddock, Sales and Marketing Director at FWBS Ltd. added: "FWBS are recognised for delivering industry leading productivity gains to legal professionals firm-wide, with ease of adoption. The Treasury Solicitor's Department win shows again how FWBS are the case management of choice for all large firms and legal departments who perform comprehensive due diligence."
